Confidence and humility.

Only one with a burning fire inside can ignite in others the desire to improve.

Sarah Reinertsen Motivational Speaker

When Sarah Reinertsen was a child, she was told that she'd never be able to run. At age 30, Sarah became the first female with a prosthetic leg to complete the Hawaii Ironman triathlon—a one day event that involves a 2.4-mile swim, a 112-mile bike, and a 26.2-mile run.

When you were a child, what were you told you couldn't do?

Sarah is a seasoned and versatile professional whose career has pointed toward, and been filled with stories of, motivating others to move beyond what they thought to be possible. Her athletic background and master's degree from USC led her to a position as a sports reporter in New York City. In 2003, she returned to California and joined the Challenged Athletes Foundation as program manager before she was recruited by Ossur as a marketing manager.

Over the years, she has given captivating motivational presentations for large corporate meetings, universities, schools and athletic events. "Fear Less. Live More." the vision statement for her company AlwaysTri, Inc. gives a glimpse of her style.

During 2006, after winning an ESPY award, she took a break from the speaking and racing circuits to participate in TV's "The Amazing Race." The "game" enhanced the depth of her experience for speaking and made her a recognizable symbol of determination and heart to people around the world.

Her passion is external and her excitement, contagious. Her style is graceful, professional and engaging. Whether her charge is corporate or individual motivation, team building, personnel integration, or simply being an example to others of how to overcome against everything you've been taught; she can deliver a variety of messages in a meaningful and memorable fashion with a tone that is tailored to her audience.
